Far from it; but I speak of what most important to be taken first , and I think is most melanchaly to see the ignorance of e literature of our own knownege in which the eat masses of our young men are brought up. tin, of course, is of very great use. It is the ly means of obtaining a considerable amount information which is locked up in that lanlage, and which is not to be found elsewhere. has also a noble lifendere of its own, and it is e key to the knowledge of many of the modern uga gea. It is, no doubt, a study of very high portance; but we must always remember thate people who have been held up in all uges as odels for felicity of expression, the Greeks, lew no language but their own. The Romans unt two languages. Latin and Greek; but ey learnt just enough Greek to make em neglect their Latin, and their literature is expressibly inferior to that of the mee that me before them, and who only knew one ngraine. But, allowing that we are to teach this and Greek, only see how we set about it. is no joke to bearn Latin and Greek; but it a joke as compared with learning Greek and ttin grammar. For instance, there is no doubt that Greek is a labgange of wasderful felicity of expression; but what could be mere heantiful, what more refined, what more calculated to exercise the tasta, and all the faculties of a person than the study : of French prose, carried to such perfection as it is carried by M. Prevest Paradal, Suint Beuve or the great masters of that language! We have: nothing like it in English - nothing approaching that exquisite finish and polish; and if a man wishes to exercise his mind in these things be could not have a better subject to exercise it upon then French prose. Only, the advantage . of knowing Prench would be that when he goes to Paris he would be able to order his. dinner at the rafe, and to squabble over his bill' without making himself alanghing-stock to every! one present. But all this must be put aside, and he must be put through the Greek language, the very characters of which he is sure to forget before he is 30 years of age. - Now, it depends on what you want to make men. If of mankind is to make them sophists, poetasters, and schoolmasters, you are going the right way to work; but if the object be to make them il for the deciner of life, I submit, in the words of Silney Smith, that we have too thush Latin and Greek and that if we are to have it it ought to be taught on a very different system LATIN VERSES. Probably the worst talent of all the little bileuts a mun can have in scheety is that of nuribiling verses (laughter); and yet years of our lives are taken up in the attempt to teach us to write Latin verses, which,

after all, are generally a cente of expressions . stolen from different authors, the very meaning of which the horrower very often does not himself understand, 'Laughter.) I am sure have been highly commended for vorses I could not construe myself. (Loud laughter. This of course, gives a most pofair predominance to boys who have been taught how to use a crib, because it is a thing so absurd and repulsive that I believe no one was ever known to acquire it late in life; it must be done early to be done ot all ; and I have known young men who have been prevented from gaining honours for very great classical ability because they had never been taught this known of stringing words ogether, called Latin versification; (Observ.) There is a movement going on against it, and I do have at any rate we shall get rid of that here is another thing to my mind almost as baurd, and it is the way we learn a language. I consider that a manuaderstands alanguage when he can read with fluency and ease a good plain straight forward anthor, who writes grammatis: cally and sensibly. That is very soon done, comparatively, in Latin and Greek, if that is all that is wanted. But that is not half enough ; here is no trature in that; that is very simple. (Langhter.) What you must do is—you must take a place that is hopelessly erabbed, where the amunicipais has gone to sleep, or been tipsy, or has bustaken the meaning of the text or something or other; and then you must read. perhaps, two or three pages of notes of all the wise men who have ever read this passage written in very bad Latin, each stating his idea of how at ought to be reformed, and then you must o give your own opinion on it. Why, I venture to any if Æschylus were to come to life again he would be easily plucked on his own verses. by an Oxford examiner. (Lond laughter and cheers.) And as for Homer, Lam quite certain he did not know the difference between the mominative and accusative cases, and had never heard of it. (Laughter.) And yet the best years of our lives are spent in these yrofitless analyses of works that were produced by men atterly

Welf gentlemen, we are going to make an expedition to Abyssinia. The whole thing turns ipon the nature of the country. What do we know about it? There is a great deal to he known w about it. Many persons have visited it, and y written upon it: but what are we taught about fit; It is as much as a man can do to find where Abyessinia is on the map, let alone the is finding out of a single town in it. I have amused myself with trying to ascertain what e people know on the subject, and I have hardly a found any one who could point out Gondar, the ng capital of the country, on the map. Yet it is us surely as important to know the place where the adventions will soon be directed as it is tof g knew that Halicarnassus was the empital o. Carfa, or that there were 23 cities of the Volse y cians in the Campagns of Rome. I will giv, y you und more instance, and it is from the Bible e in regard to which you might have supposed a better things. (A laugh.) You are all aware that that in the last Session of Parliament Mr. an Bright very facetionally denominated certain lew gentlemen by a name derived from a cave. m. (Laught r and cheers.) Well, I assure you, re gentlemen, there is not one person I met in to twenty—and I speak of people of education is (loud laughter and cheera) -and I was under in the inclancholy and degrading necessity of explaining to them what it meant, and thus pointing the arrow that was aimed at my own in berest. (Great laughter and cheers.) MODERN LANGUAYES.

unconscious of the rules we are endeavouring to elicit from them.

We have, I may say bablly, a literature unparalleled in the world. (Cheers.) But me which of our great classical authors is to roung man required to read in order to re obtain the highest honours which our educaan I tional institutions can give him ? He studies in ne. the most minute manner the literature of we Orecee and Rome, but as for Chancer, Spenser ich or any of our carlier classics or the great be both and Charles, it never occurs to lim to read sees them; and the consequence is that the language and is impoverabled. The noble English of our forefathers drops out of use, and the minds of our ged young then are employed in stringing together a at becameters. (Laughter.) - Then, as to modern bile languages, there is some feeble attempt being ans- ma e to teach them now, but nothing effectual; there and seriely if the English language is to nch have a preference over modern languages, modern languages ought also to have a prefere

ence over the ancient. I have been abroad with a party of half a dozen first-class Oxford men. none of whom could speak a word of French or. German to order anything we, we wanted; and if the waiter had not been better educated than we were (loud laughter) and known some other language than his own, we might all have started (Laughter.) COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE Hongkong, Thursday Evening. A fair amount of business has been done in Bengal Drug, notwithstanding the high prices. Market for Patrin opened in the morning at $655 cash, advancing to $660 immediately, and closing at $6621, sales are reported even at $665 to natives on credit terms. Transactions that had been done sometime ago, the purchasers having the option to demand the drug till about the end of the mouth, have had to be arranged, as |calls were being made for deng. It appears that the entire stock of Patna has passed into the hands of a single individual, all the large mporters are quite cleared out. 12th sales and responsibility of Mr. George Fallow and responsibility of Mr. George Fallow of the lattile is quoted at $650 with few or no sellers.
